

The Boston Chapter of the International Association for Healthcare Security and Safety (IAHSS) is pleased to announce the 2011 One-day Educational Seminar. The program content will touch upon relevant issues in today's healthcare environment while also providing an opportunity to network with other safety and security professionals. While this event is presented by IAHSS, the subject matter offered at this program that is not specific to healthcare will be of value to all security, safety, compliance and risk management professionals. ASIS members are encouraged to attend.

The International Association for Healthcare Security & Safety is a not-for-profit professional organization of healthcare security and safety executives around the world. Our membership also includes vendors offering state-of-the-art products and services that serve to enhance security and safety programs.

The IAHS was founded in 1968 by a group of healthcare security professionals, and has grown to be the largest association of its kind. It works to improve and professionalize security and safety in healthcare facilities. It promotes cooperation among the members and provides healthcare security and safety executives with current information through educational programs and publications designed to meet the challenges and complexities of protecting a modern healthcare facility.
